How Many Bites?

"Every dog is allowed two bites," our lawyer friends have told us from time to time.

Whether this is straight out of Blackstone or a stock joke of the legal profession, we do not know.

Assuming it is true, Ulysses has used up his two bites.

We reported the complaints of two of his victims in last issue of the Pine Cone: Bernard Donahoe, who reported to the police that Ulysses bit him on January 30; and Tom Yale who said he got his bite on December 24. Since then Roland A. Fenstemacher reported that Ulysses broke rabies quarantine on February 2 and bit him while he was taking a picture of the house occupied by Mrs. Genevieve Bartholomew on Ocean Avenue between Santa Rita and Guadalupe. He is an appraiser.

Miss Ethelinda James says that Ulysses bit her late last fall.

That totals up to four individuals who claim painful acquaintance with Ulysses' teeth.

One of them, Tom Yale, has filed suit in small claims court to recover medical costs and compensation for damaged clothing. He has named Mrs. Genevieve Bartholomew the responsible party. Up until several days ago, Mrs. Bartholomew was assumed to be Ulysses' owner. But now she claims she is merely his caretaker. Ulysses belongs to a Mr. Molten who is in Germany, she told a county animal shelter attendant.

The Fenstemacher incident created a furor because the county health department had notified Mrs. Bartholomew to pen up the dog for 14 days' rabies observation after he had bitten Mr. Donahoe, and only seven days of the quarantine had elapsed when he was free to bite Mr. Fenstemacher.

Dr. Donald Criswell, public health veterinarian in charge of the county animal shelter decided that Ulysses' quarantine would have to be carried out under supervision at the county pound. A pound man came to Carmel, enlisted the aid of Police Lieutenant William Ellis and they went after Ulysses. The mongrel black poodle, after dodging his pursuers, escaped into the Lenten observances in Carmel churches begin next week. On Ash Wednesday the 40 days of Lent start for all Catholics when foreheads are annointed with ashes at Carmel Mission Basilica as a symbol of mortality. Ashes will be distributed after weekday Masses at 7:30 and 11:30 o'clock Wednesday morning. The 11:30 o'clock morning Mass will continue on weekdays all through the Lenten season.

Mayor Wants Action On Rooming House Abuses In Residence District

Carmel Mayor Frank Putnam sounded a note of alarm at last night's city council meeting when he spoke in criticism of the continuing, overt and flagrant violation of the city's residential zoning laws by rooming house and guest house operators.

He painted a picture of these operators, who under law are allowed a maximum of four paying guests per night in R-1 districts, packing transients in to the rafters while the visitors' cars jam the streets through the night and early morning hours.

"If you drive through these areas in the mornings," the mayor said, "you'll see they don't look like residential areas at all, but mammoth tourist operations. We worry about non-conforming uses in our business district, but it's our residence district that's really deteriorating rapidly into a maze of motels, though they remain in the guise of private residences. Some even have a couple of illegal electric signs going.

"I've seen as many as five cars in a single small driveway. Now I ask you, how could four paying guests possibly arrive in five cars? The real figure is probably more like twenty guests. In one instance I know of, a rooming house has paved the entire yard to accommodate the transients' autos.

"If we cannot enforce our present ordinances, then let's scrap them and get some we can enforce. If this isn't possible, then let's eliminate all tourist homes and rooming houses in the residential areas."

The neighborhoods west of Dolores Street and south of Ocean were cited as containing the most flagrant cases of continuing violation. Councilman Whittlesey said he knew of many instances where large beach homes were bought by people intending to rent rooms and many of the rentals would be considered violations of the law.

Building Inspector Floyd Adams said he could not agree with the mayor that the violations are increasing. He said it's always been like this.

He blamed past failures at prosecution under the ordinance on the court's reluctance at the time to do anything that might hint of violation of the rights of a homeowner against unreasonable entries and searches, and hence a lack of opportunity to gather and produce evidence on the part of the city. However, Adams added, the situation may be changed now, as far as the feeling of the court goes.

The matter was left by the council with suggestions that the city attorney work out feasible ideas for enforcement or replacement of the present laws, which could be presented to the public welfare committee for study.

Council Eyes Valley Shopping Center, Talks Annexation

A two-to-one vote last night put the Carmel City Council on record as opposing further commercial zoning at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

Then the councilmen turned to and tackled the Carmel Valley mouth question from another angle: if the area were annexed, would the increased city sales tax from an even more highly developed commercial zone there offset the loss to Carmel of a green and lovely natural belt on the village outskirts? Or would it?

The vote action came through adoption of a Public Welfare Committee report dis-recommending an application by Sam Smith asking special zoning on 29 acres, 12 for C-1 purposes and 17 for R-3, probably for motel and convention hall purposes. Public hearing on the request has been set by the County Planning Commission for February 28.

In the absence of Councilman Francis Whitaker, Councilmen Eben Whittlesey and Gunnar Norberg voted the opposition to the application over the dissenting vote of John Chitwood. Mayor Frank Putnam had expressed an opinion agreeing with Chitwood's. The area lies within Carmel's 3-mile zone of interest and has long been a point of discussion with the council, which voted against the original commercialization plans there.

As for the possible annexation, Mayor Putnam said, "It has been my personal thought that we could

Arts Commissioners Propose Forest Theater Sunday Shows And City-Owned Art Museum

Arts commissioners, yesterday afternoon, received with enthusiasm two proposals: The first, a plan to revive the Forest Theater as a community cultural center; the second, to establish a permanent art museum at city hall.

Commissioner Glenn Kearns proposed a series of cultural events at the Forest Theater, to be known as Forest Theater-Sundays. Commissioner Richard Lofton suggested that paintings by outstanding local artists be acquired by the city for permanent exhibition in the council chambers.

Mr. Kearns' report recommended that, every Sunday afternoon during the summer months, informal programs by local creative and performing artists should be presented at the Forest Theater from 1:00 - 4:00 o'clock. Townspeople and visitors would be free to come and leave during these hours, also see friends and meet artists during the "generous" breaks between parts of the program.

Refreshments, he continued, could be served during intermissions by members of the Carmel Youth Center, in a booth similar to those the young people operate at the Crosby tournament. Proceeds would go to the center.

He proposed a small donation, not more than 25 cents for adults and ten cents for children, should be the admission charge. Larger donations would be accepted, if offered. These funds would be used to improve the city-owned Forest Theater at the discretion of the city council, he added.

Programs, by Peninsula artists,

Clayton Neill, Jr. First Candidate For School Board

Clayton Neill, Jr., son of Carmel City Engineer Clayton B. Neill and Mrs. Neill, announced yesterday that he would be a candidate for one of the two vacancies on the Carmel Unified School District Board of Trustees.

If elected, he will be the first graduate of Carmel High School to serve on the board. Former school board members Gordon Campbell and Glenn Leidig were graduates of Sunset but the district did not have its own high school when they were of an age to attend.

Clayton was born in San Francisco 31 years ago. He came here with his parents when he was a small boy. After graduating from Sunset he achieved scholastic and athletic honors at Carmel High School. He was co-captain of the basketball team, player on the football team, class president, and honor scholarship torch winner. He graduated in 1946.

He received his degree in civil engineering at Stanford, and a Master's at the Stanford School of Business.

After three years in the Navy as supply officer on a submarine tender and destroyer, he was employed in San Francisco with a certified public accountant firm.

In 1957 he became associated here with his father in his engineering firm and other business interests which include the Village Hardware, four water companies and a ranch.

Clayton lives in Carmel Valley with his wife Katie, and two daughters, Kathy, five and Kim, one year old. Kathy, a native of Michigan, he met at Stanford. She has taught first and second grades in New Jersey and in San Diego.

Clayton is manager for a Little League Team, a member of Carmel Rotary, attends Episcopal Church, belongs to the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club.

The expiration of George Yates' and Ted Fehring's terms creates the vacancies on the school board. The business and finance experience of both men have been of great value to the board. Both have announced they will not run

High School Students Win State, National Scholastic Honors

State and national scholarship awards were presented to Carmel High School seniors at a student body assembly yesterday.

Nine senior girls received Carmel High School's highest scholastic award, life membership in the California Scholastic Federation, when pins were presented to Sally Campbell, Barbara Cooke, Gudny Eide, Cornelia Lieb, Mary Martin, Ellen Merrifield, Sharon Predmore, Jeanie Roeder and Jane Tetley.

Each girl had been a CSF member for at least four semesters, one in her senior year. As the first semester of the senior year ended last month, this was the first time any of the girls could attain CSF life membership.

Certificates of merit were presented to five seniors, all finalists in the National Merit Scholarship program. This is the highest number of Carmel High School seniors to attain this honor in any graduating class. They are Mary Martin, Sharon Predmore, Mike Walsh, John Willcox and Linda Young.

These students are among the one-half of one percent of all high school students in the United States to be chosen as National Merit Scholarship program finalists.

An NMS committee will chose, from finalists all over the country, students who will be awarded college scholarships ranging from $100 to $1500 a year.

MP-TV Offers Chance For Closed Circuit Championship Fight

If enough cable subscribers send in $2.00 or more to MP-TV, box 3455, Carmel, before February 15, they will receive closed circuit TV broadcast of the Patterson-Johanson championship fight, live from Miami, Florida, on March 13.

This is a non-profit undertaking by the cable company. Two dollars per set is needed to cover the cost of telecast. Some subscribers, anxious to see the fight and afraid that there will not be 100 per cent participation are sending in larger checks, just in case. Proceeds in excess of cost will be given to the Carmel Youth Center. If there is insufficient response and the telecast is cancelled, money will be returned to those who sent it.

PADRE CAGERS SPLIT WITH GONZALES; LOSE TO MENLO-ATHERTON

Coach Dan Yurkovich's Carmel High varsity hoop squad kept within hailing distance of first place in the CCAL B-division basketball chase last Friday night as it hung a 50-38 decision on the hard-trying Gonzales High quintet. While the Spartans made a game fight of it all the way, the Carmel lads possessed too much power for the valley cagers and wore them out with their strong rebounding and sticky defense. The Padres pumped through 21 field goals to 15 for the Spartans and had no difficulty controlling the backboards against the stubby Gonzales crew. Live Oak, deadlocked with the Padres for second place, slid by Hollister in a rousing battle enlivened by fisticuffs and the Gilroy Mustangs maintained their top position by whacking the San Lorenzo quintet in easy fashion.

In getting by Gonzales, the Padres took it easy during the first half and were on the short end of a 16-13 score when the teams left the floor for the halftime intermission. However, the Red and Gray squad put on the pressure to open the gap to 34-27 at the end of the third quarter and came with a rush in the final heat to post a 50-38 victory.

Bob Little and Jim Brown provided the big scoring punch for the Padres, Little hitting for 14 points and Brown coming through with 13. Excellent rebounding jobs by Chris and John Wilkin plus the fine playmaking of Mike Draper helped to put the Padres over the top in the crucial league tilt.

Carmel's lightweight squad made a determined effort to remain in the running for the limited title but was thwarted by the speed of the Spartan Babes and dropped the decision by a 40-32 count. After playing nearly flawless ball against the favored Live Oak midgets, Coach Harold Lippstreu's charges came apart at the seams against Gonzales and were guilty of erratic passing and scatter-arm shooting. The Little Spartans had the local lights down, 18 to 16, at the half and increased the lead to 32-26 at the end of the third quarter.

Little Teddy Leidig continued his hot shooting streak in the losing cause against Gonzales as he pumped through 14 points to top all shooters. The hustling Carmel junior has been hitting with unerring accuracy in recent outings and has been the sparkplug in the Little Padres' recent upsets. The strong rebounding of Steve Johnson, Jack DeWitt, and Bobby Moffatt kept the Little Padres in the game and gave them a chance to salvage the win as late as the fourth quarter. Too much speed proved to be the downfall of Lippstreu's charges as the shifty Gonzales lads got the vital one-step lead to beat the Carmel defense to the basket area.

Both Carmel varsity and lightweight teams went out of their class Saturday night at Menlo as the classy Menlo-Atherton quintets gave the Red and Gray hoopsters a lesson in precision on the hardwoods. The Carmel lightweights were shellacked, 54 to 25, and the varsity receipted for the same treatment, 58 to 29.. The smooth-working M-A varsity moved to a halftime lead against the local preps and toyed with the Carmel lads during the second half. Equipped with good height throughout the club and blessed with exceptional jumping ability, Menlo-Atherton put on a good show for the Carmel fans with a galaxy of stuff-shots and precise ball-handling. The Padres moved the ball well and had good shots but found the cover on the hoop and were able to connect on only 15 per cent of their shots. To show how tough the going was, Carmel's high scorer, Bob Little, managed only six points for his night's work.

Lightweight action was plenty sticky for the Little Padres in the first half as Menlo-Atherton broke out to a 21-4 lead in the first quarter and kept the pressure on throughout the mismatch. Ted Leidig's seven points earned him high-point honors for the Padres, but the tiny Carmel squad was in too deep against the veteran M-A aggregation.

A busy weekend ahead for the Padres this week as they host the San Lorenzo Valley Cougars Friday night and travel to King City Saturday night.

SAN LORENZO VALLEY HIGH AT CARMEL GYM FRIDAY P.M.

With the pressure on from the threatening Live Oak Acorns, Carmel High's varsity basketball team faces a serious challenge from the San Lorenzo Valley Cougars this Friday night at the Carmel High pavilion. The Cougars are no threat to cop the league title but they are in a fine spot

Soldiers Patrol Beach Looking For Missing Man

Soldiers continue to patrol the length of Carmel Beach in an Army endeavor to recover the body of Robert Lewis, believed drowned while attempting to rescue David J. Bays of Fort Ord, who lost his life while swimming at the foot of Ocean Avenue on Sunday afternoon.

Susie Hudson, Ocean and Del Mar, telephoned the police department at 3:57 o'clock Sunday afternoon. She reported swimmers were being swept to sea and needed help. Police called the Red Cross ambulance operated by members of the Carmel fire department.

Police learned that three Army Language School students, Robert Lewis, Robert Simpson and Nicholas Niles, had seen Bays in distress, and swam out to help him. Simpson remained with Bays. The other two men returned to shore to summon aid. On the way in Niles noticed Lewis was no longer swimming behind him.

Meanwhile skin divers helped Simpson bring Bays to shore. Ambulance attendants attempted resuscitation to no avail. Bays was pronounced drowned.

Helicopters searched the water at the foot of Ocean Avenue until dark on Sunday in an attempt to find Lewis' body and the air search continues.

bushes, and the pound man told Mrs. Bartholomew to bring Ulysses over to the pound that evening or be liable for $500 fine, six months in jail, or both, for failing to comply with the county rabies regulations.

Mrs. Bartholomew brought Ulysses to the pound, made her statement of non-ownership, and that's where Ulysses is now, until 6:00 o'clock tonight, when his five days quarantine is up. Quarantine under a veterinarian's observation needs only five, and not the 14 days required when a dog is confined by the owner.

At 6:00 o'clock tonight the pound will notify Mrs. Bartholomew she may come for Ulysses.

"We have no choice," Dr. Caswell told us yesterday. "Dogs are free to roam the residence district in Carmel providing they have a license. Carmel is the only town in the county that does not have an ordinance prohibiting this."

So Ulysses will be among us again tomorrow, if Mrs. Bartholomew chooses to bring him home.

Animals at Home and Afield, a film with Robert Hermes as narrator, will be shown at Sunset Auditorium this evening at 8:00 o'clock as the third Audubon Screen Tour presented by the Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society and the Carmel Adult School.

Robert Hermes, nature photographer, has studied wilderness creatures at home and in extensive travels. Birds, mammals and other forms of wildlife are the performers in the all-color motion picture which also shows their private lives and worlds.

Mr. Hermes returns here after an absence of several years. His career has included work as a commercial artist and filming nature films. He has been official photographer of the Royal Ontario Museum's Ungava Crater Expedition and Nova Scotia's International Tuna Cup Matches. His pictures have appeared in Life, Illustrated London News, Collier's, the National Geographic and other magazines. He has won twice first prize in International Graflex contests.

Is A Flag A Sign? Council Thinks So

Is a flag a sign? And when permission to fly a "national flag" is granted or implied by the city, might that not mean many things to many people, especially if one were in business as an Italian restaurant, say, or a French import house?

As a town that has in years past weathered all sorts of past controversies on flag-flying all the way from a decision to remove pole holes set in the sidewalks in front of businesses to protect the high heels of lady passers-by to a regret that not enough flags are used any more on holidays, Carmel was ready to handle these matters with ease.

Yes, a flag is a sign since a sign is defined by city ordinance as any object bearing words or symbols, but the city frowns on use of national emblems of alien lands for advertising purposes.

The matter came to light again and all these angles were reviewed summarily by the city council last night when the group adopted a report of the public welfare committee recommending the Red Cross be granted permission to install sockets on exterior walls of their buildings for display of the organization's emblems along with the national emblem.

There was no objection to that, of course, but the general hope seemed to be that the flag situation wouldn't get out of hand although it conceivably might.

Business men in the district, with the balance of the board in mind, have asked young Neill to run because of his training and experience in business and engineering.

Neill's statement:

"The Carmel District is losing two outstanding members of the Board of Education, both of whom have contributed valuable business backgrounds to the making of Board policies. With the ever-increasing drain on all taxpayers, it is paramount that good educational instruction be provided within the framework of sound financial management. The District faces many important decisions in the next four years, including the continuation of over-ride taxes, curriculum changes, increasing enrollments, and possible annexation —and my desire is to assist in these decisions."

This is the "wagon" we hitched to a star

"That's us, taking a spin in our 'wagon'—the sleekest sportscar you ever saw. Actually, it's a by-product of something much more important. Something that began when Betty said to me a few years back: 'Jim, doesn't it worry you a little that we're not getting more living done?'

"We talked about it far into the night. We were drifting. It was time to hitch our wagon to a star, we decided — to pick out a dream and then plan toward it.

"What was it we really wanted? Our own business. College education for the kids. Enough left over to enjoy some of life's extras, like the sportscar that had always been a 'someday' thing with me."

Jim and Betty Hall worked at it. They soon realized everything hinged upon how well they managed money. And for help in this, they turned to Crocker-Anglo Bank.

They started with a savings account. Then, when Jim's chance to have his own business arose, he used a Crocker-Anglo loan to augment his savings. Over the years other C-A business loans helped him move ahead.

When Jim needed a site for a small plant, Crocker-Anglo's real estate loan department helped finance it. And when Betty wanted to assure college education for the children, C-A set up a family trust for the purpose. Later, the Halls called on Crocker-Anglo for help in setting up their first investment program.

Maybe you've seen the Halls giving their "wagon" a workout. They're just people. No different from the rest of us except...

They had a plan. Or call it a dream. And they used their bank for all it's worth.

Starker Gives Highly Satisfying Concert For Carmel Music Society

By Eben Whittlesey

It is not for this reviewer to make comparisons with Casals and Primrose, such is for the professional musician. But seen from any angle, Janos Starker is entitled to be measured beside the great cellists of our day. The program he played last Saturday evening for the Carmel Music Society was well chosen, serious and presented without any ear-catching concessions to popular taste. The artist has very little platform manner, preferring in the best tradition to submerge his identity in the music and allow his art to speak for itself, or for the composer, which it does with superb eloquence.

Pieces en Concert by Couperin, the first group, were revealing, disclosing and unusually light and mobile. The instrument never seemingly breathy or lumbering. Skillful shaping of tone was soon evident. I have seldom heard a more clear or controlled tone. There was motion and vitality in every phrase.

Continuing with the French literature, the artist played Adagio and Allegro by Francoeur. We were not told whether the composer was Francois of the name, or his nephew Louis Joseph, but the measured opening gave way to a brilliant and intricate development. This was played with complete ease and was a pleasing bit of virtuosity. Mr. Starker makes you forget the cello can often be a ponderous instrument which seems to struggle to bring forth its dramatic or lyric statements.

Then we heard the delightful Sonata Opus 119 in C Major, by Prokofieff. The warm tone color, subtle form and interesting piano part amply justified the sudden transition to the 20th century. Mr. Starker seemed to revel in the humor and romantic qualities so characteristic of the composer. As so often with Prokofieff works of this type, the piano part was of great importance, and it was very well played by Helen Taverniti, the accompanist.

Many programs are planned to provide lighter, or at least more colorful, fare after the intermission, apparently on the theory that special effort is required to hold the attention of the audience. So it was with surprise that I saw the Suite No. 3 in C Major for the unaccompanied cello scheduled to open the second half of the concert. I have heard this work performed by able cellists who left the listener with only the feeling that a scholarly accomplishment of heroic dimensions and boring monotony had been successfully negotiated. But this was a clear, unhurried, thoroughly coherent performance. The most involved double stop passages flowed easily and with great beauty of tone. The style was never dry, and there was a feeling of life and variety through even the most complicated working out of those involved variations which Bach could never lay down until he had explored every possible musical cranny. Absence of the piano served to emphasize the singing quality of Mr. Starker's tone.

An interesting finale for the evening was performance of De Falla's 6 Chansons Populaires. These are full of variety, of infectious Latin rhythms, of changing moods. There are suggestions of gypsy dances and moody love songs. The piano part was important and well played by Miss Taverniti. The quiet ending was followed by a most enthusiastic audience response. Two encores, the first a Toccata by Frescobaldi and the last a more modern work acknowledged vigorous applause. It would be hard to imagine a more thoroughly satisfying concert.

FROM A LIBRARIAN'S NOTEBOOK

By Ruth Galvin Thornburg

In our efforts better to serve our public, we now and again change our policies, only to find that we have rushed ahead too fast and must retrace our steps. This is true in the matter of new fiction. For many years this library allowed only one seven-day book per borrower's card. But we came to the place where we had a lot of them and we changed our rules to allow several to each card, at a single time. But our reserves have dropped so low that we are again forced to make a two book limit. We probably have nasty suspicious minds, but we think some people charge out two new novels one evening and then come in a day or so later and take two more, and perhaps two more, and after the whole family reads them the books are returned. We have no check on it because we file under the date due rather than the patron's number. Oh Well, it was only a suspicion! Anyway, it is again two to a card.

Some people are protesting because of the back door being locked after 6:00 o'clock in the evening, and we are sorry about that. When we explain that it is to reduce the number of reference books slipping away, they understand.

We are trying out two other things. The first is to post reviews and notices of new books on the bulletin board after we decide to order them, so that you may see some of the things which are coming and fill out postal cards for them if you wish. The other thing is to place these reviews in a loose-leaf notebook at the desk after the books are ready for circulation. Keep checking the board and the book to know what is new, if it is new books you want. Here are some older ones we liked and recommend.

Mrs. Marshall in our circulation department says, "A book that will always remain in one's mind as utterly charming and delightful is Elizabeth de Trevino's My Heart Lies South. It is a former American newspaperwoman's affectionately written account of her marriage to a middle class Mexican businessman and her endeavor to adjust to an entirely new way of life. This was a life in which his family played a dominant part, and which included among other things, having to become adjusted to living without heat during the cold winter months because the Mexicans considered it unhealthy. Her attempt to conform and her observations on their life and customs make the book a humorous and relaxing little journey south of the border."

Mrs. Helene Wood, our cataloger, enjoyed The Little Locksmith by Katherine Hathaway, which was published shortly after the author's death in 1942. She says it is "An autobiography of rare charm by a woman with a twisted body, who believed that love and goodness are one. Stricken with spinal disease at the age of five, she spent ten years confined to her bed, where, in the loneliness of childhood, she created an exquisite world of the imagination. Without self-pity or bitterness, but with beauty and courage, she describes her adjustment to life as a woman, part of which was spent as an illustrator of children's books and part restoring an old house in Costine, Maine."

Nancy Wilson Ross edited a book on Zen Buddhism which is entitled The World of Zen, an East West Anthology. Interest in Zen is growing today and this compilation shows the wide range of its influence and application. It goes into circulation this week and so do three new books on the Civil War, and many another bit of good reading, including eight new novels.

I Remember When . . .

By Tom Tooker

It was getting toward summer in Carmel. It was 1925 and I was twelve years old. I would sit up late at night listening for long distance radio stations with my one-tube set. Our gardener, Maglone, told me that I could never expect to get anything as long as I had the aerial (not antenna!) tied to a dead tree. And I gave it plenty of thought, too. And then I remember visiting the Skenes.

Uncle Ralph and Edith. Uncle Ralph had a superheterodyne. An Atwater Kent radio in a big cabinet that could probably get all over the world! He showed me how to adjust the four big dials and coordinate them for the squeal of an incoming signal. Although they weren't really relatives, they were awfully close friends of ours and warmly welcomed my curiosity-ridden presence. I stayed for three nights. I remember well sitting up until all hours dialing squeaks, sirens and moans and an occasional bit of music from WLW or WGN in Chicago. They (the Skenes) didn't mind a bit. And I even remember one night when Ralph came out bleary-eyed in the early morning to inquire about my luck. Only health prevented him from sitting out the vigil with me through the gruelling dx (long distance) contests for remote signals. His interest (in me) and generosity, and food, and friendly warmth bridged an otherwise unbridgeable gap between inquiring youth and methodical adulthood. This was the beginning of a great friendship that I specifically recall as being personal, very personal.

He, Ralph, understood 'us guys', us kids and the things we liked to do . . . and even better yet he approved of what we were doing. He never laughed at me, criticised, or hinted that anything or everything he had wasn't something we could share together. And appreciate. And it wasn't long before I began looking in the other rooms and the other closets and inspecting the innumerable trophies and souvenirs that he had stacked away here and there. And these amazing gadgets like knives, pelts, ivory carved animals, and other mementoes weren't (to my surprise!) purchased in a Monterey antique shop or acquired en route from San Francisco to Monterey. They were real! From Africa! And Uncle Ralph, it turned out, had been there not just as a visitor but as a Judge in Nairobi and Kenya and many other far away jungle places where the natives were just like I had read about in travel stories and books.

Slowly this man took on an aura of respectability and intrigue and knowledge that no one else (probably) even could touch. In his gentle and unassuming manner he told me about his adventures, read from a book that followed the construction of the railroad through the deepest jungle. And there on page 134 of this true life story with pictures was Ralph's name! For me, this was as great a fame as having a personal preface dedicated by the much traveled Stanley.

And Aunt Edith, always dedicated to service and helping Ralph at any and every turn. A more devoted spouse I have as yet to meet. At first I was never sure whether Ralph or his wife approved of me (and there were plenty of antics which could cause a raised eyebrow, I was sure) but when my natural interests centered around Ralph and his African pseudo-dynasty and I became a genuine admirer per se, there was little left but to smile ingratiatingly at my insistence for more and more stories. Which were granted.

Recently I was reading in the New Yorker a series of profiles on explorations of the Nile, and its source. Somehow it had more of a familiar ring than perhaps other distant lands and, of course, I knew why. With a little effort I procured a more elaborate map of the Continent and identified the towns and places that my good friend Uncle Ralph had explored and helped build into a semi-civilized state many years before. It gave me a feeling of personal interest, more than superficial.

Pagan Song, New Book Of Poems By Walden Garratt

For many years there have come to the Pine Cone occasionally the poems of Walden Garratt. Because of their quality we have nearly always used them in our Poetry Column. Recently we have received his new book Pagan Song, published by the Wings Press of Mill Valley, and here we find many of his most beautiful poems. They make a collection which confirms our high opinion of the poet's work.

Mr. Garratt was born in California and is the great-grandson of California pioneers. He is an alumnus of the University of California at Berkeley and both he and his artist wife are teachers. He has travelled extensively in Europe and Asia but most of his poems have a distinctly Californian sound. He is keenly sensitive to all the beauties of this state and has not only looked at surfaces but within, to find the essential beauty. Not only does he look at what he sees, but he allows the sky, the sea, the earth to look at him as it were, and he is moved by this poetic experience. This is most evident in the poems which speak of the stars and the "occult realities of the night".

There is a strange, moving quality about such lines as "Winged with eternal beauty, flies white cygnus through the chasmal dark;" and in the poem Autares the lines make the star come alive with awesome glory: "Kindred of Mars, great crimson bird, whose wings the purple south inflame". Earth becomes "a pebble on a shingly shore" and "the gaze of the mind is upward through the cavernous realms of space". But earth is by no means ignored. The sea has its own language, the desert its unsuspected greatness where "the voice of Moses haunts the wind."

Perhaps this poet has realized his own unique quality when he says "my vision ever seeks to see the beautiful against the strange." It is this that gives these clear lucid poems their special appeal. They do not need to lean upon obscurity to give the reader a new experience or to shatter him. There are other ways of being shattered, delicately, surprisingly, as with familiar things newly seen, sounds newly heard, the night sky filled with living song. —D.H.

UNSPOKEN

My heart is like a burning bush
On fire with love for you;
If you would only look my way;
If you would love me too!

Oh, I could give you gleaming joy;
Oh, I could give you life;
If you would only love me too
And take me for your wife!

But you go your way, I go mine
Our glances merely cross
And what could be earth's purest gold
Instead is merely dross!

—ELIZABETH WILLIAMS COSGROVE

REMEMBRANCE

The tower still stands upon the grassy hill;
My heart breaks now as I remember
The arc of silver moon, the air so still
The magic of that night in lush September.

These are the steps we climbed together,
Secure, content, my hand upon your arm,
As I looked down upon the purple heather
I thought no earthly power could break the charm.

To-day, we walk deep chasms, widening miles apart,
And Love, my love and yours lies cold and dead—
Oh to erase those deep scars from my heart!
Oh to forget those burning words you said!

FINALE

Winter stars still splintered the sky,
The hillside was covered with snow—
I placed your love letters in the grate,
They made a golden glow,
On cabin walls, and high, bare rafters.
My heart knew a deep regret—
That I had remembered too long
And too soon, you could forget.

—ESTELLE DAVIS TAYLOR

THAT ONLY

All that I ask of you is love—
No other thing
The steady air the bird requires
To fortify its wing—

The sun the sleeping boughs must feel
To hasten forth their leaves,
The wakening power, the kindling fire,
That only love achieves.

The warmth the frozen grass must have
To flourish straight and tall—
Nothing but love, no other thing,
That only which is all.

—DORA HAGEMEYER.

Johnson Announces Leaders For March Red Cross Drive

August H. Johnson, Chairman for the Carmel Red Cross Campaign for Members and Funds, announced to the Pine Cone today that he has selected most of the key people to organize the March Fund Drive. Those already appointed are: Carmel Residential, Mrs. Kenneth Roberts; Hotels and Motels; Allman Cook; Pebble Beach, Mrs. Jimmy Hatlo; Carmel Highlands, Mrs. Kenneth Macpherson; Highlands Business, Everett Banfield; Carmel Valley Business, Dr. Edward Marcucci; Lower Carmel Valley, Mrs. Jack Cowan; Big Sur, Miss Doris Fee.

"The fact that the Carmel Red Cross has consistently met with success in raising its needed funds," said Mr. Johnson, "shows that the people of our chapter area understand and have confidence in the Red Cross programs. Of the $28,500 we expect to raise," he continued, "$21,403 stays in the community to be used to operate the Red Cross Chapter, maintain our three ambulances, pay our share for the collecting and processing of blood and the other eight chapter services."

Rose Ann Rudolph

Mrs. Rose Ann Hunter Rudolph died in a Ukiah hospital on February 2 after a short illness. She had owned land in Carmel since 1912 when her mother, Mrs. Henry Alexander Hunter, gave a lot to each of her four children.

Mrs. Rudolph was born in San Francisco on February 26, 1879. When she was four years old she moved with her parents to Castroville, later to Salinas where her father was a city councilman and, until his death in 1917, superintendent of the Monterey County Hospital.

Following her marriage to Frederick Caspar Rudolph in 1902, she lived in San Francisco but spent summers in Carmel. Since the death of her husband in 1947, Mrs. Hunter divided her time between her homes in San Francisco, Carmel and Mendocino County.

She was a member of the Native Daughters of the Golden West and the California Historical Society.

Survivors are a son, Bertram F. Rudolph of Willits; a brother, Otto H. Hunter of Santa Cruz; a grandson, Bertram F. Rudolph Jr. of Salinas and Carmel Highlands; a nephew, Otto H. Hunter Jr. of San Jose; a niece, Miss Muriel Hunter of La Jolla; and a great-granddaughter.

Funeral services were held in Willits.

Arts Com. Propose Forest Theater Sunday Shows

could be musical selections, poetry or dramatic readings, ballad singing or dance numbers, he suggested. An art or craft show would be part of the afternoon's entertainment, and exhibit work of Peninsula persons only.

Forest Theater-Sundays would provide "A place to go on Sunday and enjoy yourself" he said. The use of, and interest in, the Forest Theater would be promoted by these informal comunity gatherings. An opportunity to display and encourage local artistic talent would be provided; also a source of income to re-establish Forest Theater facilities and support Youth Center activities. In addition, artists and townspeople would be given an opportunity informally to get to know one another at the Forest Theater-Sundays, Mr. Kearns reported.

All staging, both for performances and art and craft shows, would be the simplest possible and require no lighting, he emphasized; preparation would be easy and without expense.

Other commissioners received Mr. Kearns' report with enthusiasm. At the motion of Commissioner Nelo Drizari, his report was adopted in essence unanimously. Adoption of details of the report were held until the March meeting of the commission. This would give each commissioner time to study Mr. Kearns' report and add constructive suggestions, Mr. Drizari hoped.

Mr. Lofton proposed that the present "sepulchral" city council chambers could become a permanent art museum displaying the work of outstanding Peninsula painters. Painting had been important in the development of Carmel, he stated. The museum would establish an historical record of this contribution to the character of the town. He suggested a printed biography of the artist should be displayed beside each painting.

The museum would be open to visitors and in competition to "no one", he pointed out. He suggested painting the council chambers in an off-white shade to make them "light and pleasant" after enclosing to the roof jousts the present open-construction unpainted walls with flat-surfaced material. This would provide an unbroken surface on which to display paintings, he indicated.

"I recommend we consider this idea," he concluded and added, "I am carried away already. This could be a growing thing."

Chairman Marjorie Wurzman appointed Mr. Lofton and Mr. Kearns as members of a committee to work out a plan for the art museum to present to the city council.

At yesterday's meeting, Mr. Kearns presented a plan to construct panels in the council chambers on which to exhibit paintings already owned by the city. These were of plywood, six feet wide and reaching a height of eight feet from the floor. They were shown in the plan only to the north of the front entrance and along the north wall below the dais. He estimated the panels would cost $500. This did not include lighting.

Melissa Lofton's eleventh birthday was on February 2 but she waited until Saturday to celebrate the event with a dinner party at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lofton. Each guest was asked to come to the party wearing clothes belonging to a parent. Until dinner time, games occupied the young ladies in high heels and grown-up gowns and young gentlemen in men's apparel. The usual dragon drawing contest, a feature of Missy's birthday party each year, was repeated on Saturday. Those invited were Marjorie Black, Pamela Whitworth, Marcia Lane, Anne Hill, Mary Arnold, Wade Rose, Greg True, Randy Newman and Johnny Frank. Also at the party were Missy's sister, Nancy, and Edward Faridany, both students at the University of California.

LOCAL ARTS SHOWN

Paintings by five Carmel artists are included in the February show at the Feingarten Galleries, Lincoln below Ocean. The local artists are Richard Lofton, Jean Kellogg, Gerry Wasserman, Francisco Ferro and Virginia Blair Hannon.

A tentative map for a proposed subdivision north of Carmel High School, containing 205 apartments in the development's 328 grouped units, will be considered by the county planning commission on Wednesday afternoon.

High Meadows is the name given to the subdivision planned by Gordon Hall for Carmel Land Company owned by William L. Hudson and Charles Fuller. The site is adjacent to Carmel Hills subdivision on the north, east of the intersection of Highway One and Carpenter Street. It parallels the Hatton Canyon freeway route.

Average size of the lots in High Meadows will be 20,000 square feet. Many of the lots will be smaller than this but greenbelt provision increases the average lot size to the required one-half acre.

to be the spoilers for either the Padres or the Acorns. Equipped with a so-so basketball team, the Cougars rely on the clever moves of Steve Rodriguez to keep them alive in the B-division hoop race. This 6-2 junior was an all-leaguer as a sophomore last season and is probably the top cager in the B-division this year. Without too much help, Steve has led his mates to challenging positions against all opponents this season and is rated the best all-around cager in the CCAL B-division. In the first meeting this season, the Padres edged San Lorenzo after a torrid battle which saw Rodriguez retire to the pits after a collision with Carmel's Chris Wilkin.

Tomorrow night's crucial league tilt finds Carmel hemmed in by the pressure and the visitors with everything to gain and nothing to lose. Although Carmel is two games off the pace set by league-leading Gilroy, the Mustangs have been slapped down by the Board of Managers and will not be considered for league championships until 1962. Violation of football rules has made the Mustangs personae non gratae to the rest of the league and any playing they do in the league is strictly for exercise.

Coach Dan Yurkovich's Padre varsity received a staggering blow last week when Scott Forbes, a top scorer in the Red and Gray attack, was put out of action with a fractured tibia. The rangy forward has been a consistent player for the Padres all season and was just hitting peak form when the injury jinx hit him. To take up the slack occasioned by the injury to Forbes, Yurkovich has dipped into the junior-varsity ranks for support and has come up with rangy Jim Kelley, a 6-3 sophomore, who has led the jayvees to an undefeated record so far this season. In tomorrow night's fracas with San Lorenzo, the Padres figure to open with forwards Chris Wilkin and Jim Brown; center John Wilkin; and guards Bob Little and Mike Draper.

A 5::00 o'clock preliminary tussle matches the Carmel jayvees with the San Lorenzo varsity reserves. Coach Dick Lawitzke will start the action with forwards Pete Morse and John Marshall; center Tony Belleci; and guards Rick Baldwin and Bob Palma.

Carmel's lightweights dropped a paper-thin decision to the Cougar Babes in the first meeting this season and will be going all out to reverse the outcome in the rematch. The Carmel lights are the most improved hoop squad in the CCAL lineup and will rate the favorite's role in tomorrow night's fray. Coach Harold Lippstreu indicates his starters will be Ted Leidig, top lightweight scorer, Steve Fairfield, Steve Johnson, Jack DeWitt, and Jose Fernandez.

Saturday night, starting at 5:00 o'clock, the Padres go through their paces at the King City gym in a triple-header with the Mustangs. Jayvees go on at 5:00, the lightweights answer the whistle at 7:00, and the big boys take over the floor at 8:15.

Council Eyes Valley Shopping Center, Talks Of Annexation

stimulate a move to annex with the view to bringing additional revenue to the city. It would be a great loss if we did not annex at some future time."

Norberg said, "There is a legal provision for strip annexation by cities, but state law does not give cities the initiative to start annexation proceedings. This leaves us without a real voice now to control an area that could later be properly integrated into the community."

Whittlesey said, "We are looking at this from two directions, from the point of view of controlling the environment and as a source of revenue. We have been so surrounded by areas of high quality that there has seemed to be no pressure to annex other districts so that we could maintain the quality, but this is different."

Chitwood in a speech loaded with wry allusions, reminded the group that "the question of annexation is an old one with periodic surges on both sides to do something about it. Greater Carmel has in the past been happy with the fire and police protection, except on the occasions of a few fires and a few murders, and when some felt the city fire department should be obligated to serve the county out of human charity. Then too for some years the city had the picayunish attitude that the smaller we kept Carmel the better off we'd be. But the pressures have grown so great and the costs of operation so high that annexation would be desirable now."

In the earlier discussion on increased commercial zoning, Chitwood compared the descent on existing Carmel facilities by the increased populace to Sherman's march through Georgia, and pointed out that since the city has failed to take care of its parking requirements, it's bound to lose customers to outside shopping areas. Although his figures did not agree precisely with others given, he added that predictions are for an increase of 20,000 inhabitants in the Valley area in the next decade and that only an increase in the commercialized area could possibly service them all.

Another old Carmel problem came up for an airing last night. Referred for study to the Committee on Public Welfare was the question of the extent of the city's moral, if not legal, responsibility for the safety of swimmers at Carmel Beach.

The question, given urgency following a double drowning at the beach early this week, "is partly one of informing newcomers to the area of the danger, since most of the victims of accidents in the past have been people stationed at military installations in the area," Whittlesey said.

City Attorney John Morse reviewed the city's legal position on beach safety: Carmel has no jurisdiction over the bay; though the city limits are contiguous any attempt to exert control on the situation would result in the need for an insurance program so great as to be disastrous to the city.

Speaking from the audience Mrs. John E. Roland asked more strongly worded signs more prominently and frequently placed. She objected that the signs are the color of the sand and therefore not noticeable, and made two other alternative suggestions, that the beach be fenced and restricted as is Pebble Beach to cut down on the number of people there and consequently the number of accidents, or that it be taken over by the state.

Mrs. Patricia Hall also spoke on the problem, telling the council, "When you sit up there and say you can't do anything you're behaving just like Pontius Pilate. We could perhaps have a man stationed with a megaphone to warn people going into the water."

Among other business, the council:

Set a hearing for March 8 at 8:30 o'clock on the Willard Neumann appeal of a Planning Commission decision denying his application to reclassify property zoned R-1 for multi-residence purposes.

Passed resolutions advancing Peter G. Koenen to Step 2, Range 45, and John Molteni Jr. to Step 2, Range 20, and prohibiting parking on the north side of Fifth Avenue from Mission to Junipero.

Approved unanimously the reappointment by Mayor Putnam of August Nieto to another three-year term as recreation commissioner.

Accepted with Norberg dissenting a report of the lands and improvement committee accepting planting plans for the Junipero Avenue improvement program.

Adopted a recommendation of the police commissioner for installation of a stop sign and cross walk at Scenic and Ocean Avenue.

Approved ownership transfers from Edith Larson and Karl Burghardt to Edith Larson alone for The American Way at Junipero and Fifth Streets, and from Neil Weston to John A. Dowker for the Carmel Woodworking Company at Junipero and Fifth Avenues.

Approved location transfers for Carmel Home Furnishings from San Carlos and Fifth to Dolores between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, Parsons of Carmel from the Pine Inn Shops to Sixth Street between Dolores and San Carlos Streets and for Lloyd Praeger from Fifth to Eighth Avenue on San Carlos Street.

Signs were approved for The Studio Workshop and Parsons of Carmel.

Violin Program At Town House

Louis J. Fragos, Peninsula violinist and his young pupil, Taeyun Chang of Korea, will present violin selections for the Wednesday afternoon program of the Carmel Foundation Town House. Taeyun, age 12, whose father is an instructor in the Korean Department of the Army Language School, is making his second appearance at Town House. He was only ten when he first played there with Mr. Fragos. The program begins at 3:00 o'clock and will be followed by tea.

Lent Observances In Carmel Churches Start On Wednesday

liver a talk on the subject of Death and Judgment at the 7:00, 8:00, 9:00, 10:00, 11:00 and 12:15 o'clock Masses Sunday morning. This will be the third Sunday of the five-week Mission at the Basilica. Catholics and non-Catholics are invited to hear the sermons at the Mission. They are concerned with the fundamentals of the Christian religion.

Enquiry classes at Carmel Mission Basilica will cover the seven ways in which God helps Man at every moment of life, also the meaning of Baptism and Confirmation, the Sacrament of the Holy Order, the Catholic attitude towards the priest, the Catholic ceremonies, and the how Christ is present in bread and wine. There are four evening classes meeting on Mondays and Tuesdays each week, and afternoon meetings the same days at 2:00 o'clock. The public is invited.

Bishop Harry A. Clinch D.D. will confirm at Carmel Mission Basilica on Sunday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock.

JOINT ASH WEDNESDAY SERVICE

Members of this community will be given the opportunity to see and hear Bishop Pike at the Joint Ash Wednesday Service in the Carmel Presbyterian Church at 8:00 o'clock Wednesday evening. Church of the Wayfarer and All Saints' Episcopal Church members will join with the Presbyterian Church in this Ash Wednesday observance.

Dr. Robert D. Buckley, capital General Presbyter of the north coastal area of the United Presbyterian Church, will be the presiding minister at the combined service of the three churches.

He is taking the place of Dr. Joseph M. Ewing, Carmel Presbyterian Church minister, who will be away from Carmel attending meetings of the board of pensions of the Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia.

The choir of the Presbyterian Church, directed by Mrs. Joseph Sherry, will sing two anthems: Go Congregation Go! by Antes and Bach's Be Calm and Peaceful. Fred Lewis, church organist, will provide other music for the Ash Wednesday evening service.

ALL SAINTS' EPISCOPAL CHURCH

A special Pastoral Letter from the Bishop of California, the Right Reverend James A. Pike, will be read at All Saints' Episcopal Church at the 11:00 o'clock service of Morning Prayer. The Letter, which will be read according to canon law requirement, is an answer to charges of "heresy" and "communism" levelled at the Bishop from all parts of this country.
